The celebration of “Women’s History Month” at Holy Cross, and throughout the United States, shows how important the recognition of the accomplishments made by women is to how future women will shape society. By studying the achievements of the past, people become aware of the endless possibilities of life and the potential all women have for future success.

The Women’s Forum of Holy Cross also serves the purpose of generating the awareness and interest of students in women’s issues. The organization provides a place to discuss these issues and gives support by acting as a network for those affected by and concerned with contemporary women’s issues in the community.

The Women’s Forum also sponsors “The Women’s Forum Journal,” a publication that focuses primarily on women. This journal provides students with the opportunity to publish a broad range of expression through poetry, prose, art, photography, opinion, and journalism.

The celebration of “Women’s History Month” at Holy Cross, and throughout the United States, shows how important the recognition of the accomplishments made by women is to how future women will shape society. The knowledge of women’s strengths not only encourages respect by both sexes but also helps to nourish self-esteem and build confidence in children and adults. By studying the achievements of the past, people become aware of the potential all women have for future success.

The Women’s Forum of Holy Cross also serves the purpose of generating the awareness and interest of students in women’s issues. The organization provides a place to discuss these issues and gives support by acting as a network for those affected by and concerned with contemporary women’s issues in the community.

The Women’s Forum also sponsors “The Women’s Forum Journal,” a publication that focuses primarily on women. This journal provides students with the opportunity to publish a broad range of expression through poetry, prose, art, photography, opinion, and journalism.

The celebration of “Women’s History Month” at Holy Cross, and throughout the United States, shows how important the recognition of the accomplishments made by women is to how future women will shape society. The knowledge of women’s strengths not only encourages respect by both sexes but also helps to nourish self-esteem and build confidence in children and adults. By studying the achievements of the past, people become aware of the potential all women have for future success.

The Women’s Forum of Holy Cross also serves the purpose of generating the awareness and interest of students in women’s issues. The organization provides a place to discuss these issues and gives support by acting as a network for those affected by and concerned with contemporary women’s issues in the community.

The Women’s Forum also sponsors “The Women’s Forum Journal,” a publication that focuses primarily on women. This journal provides students with the opportunity to publish a broad range of expression through poetry, prose, art, photography, opinion, and journalism.

The celebration of “Women’s History Month” at Holy Cross, and throughout the United States, shows how important the recognition of the accomplishments made by women is to how future women will shape society. The knowledge of women’s strengths not only encourages respect by both sexes but also helps to nourish self-esteem and build confidence in children and adults. By studying the achievements of the past, people become aware of the potential all women have for future success.

The Women’s Forum of Holy Cross also serves the purpose of generating the awareness and interest of students in women’s issues. The organization provides a place to discuss these issues and gives support by acting as a network for those affected by and concerned with contemporary women’s issues in the community.

The Women’s Forum also sponsors “The Women’s Forum Journal,” a publication that focuses primarily on women. This journal provides students with the opportunity to publish a broad range of expression through poetry, prose, art, photography, opinion, and journalism.

The celebration of “Women’s History Month” at Holy Cross, and throughout the United States, shows how important the recognition of the accomplishments made by women is to how future women will shape society. The knowledge of women’s strengths not only encourages respect by both sexes but also helps to nourish self-esteem and build confidence in children and adults. By studying the achievements of the past, people become aware of the potential all women have for future success.

The Women’s Forum of Holy Cross also serves the purpose of generating the awareness and interest of students in women’s issues. The organization provides a place to discuss these issues and gives support by acting as a network for those affected by and concerned with contemporary women’s issues in the community.

The Women’s Forum also sponsors “The Women’s Forum Journal,” a publication that focuses primarily on women. This journal provides students with the opportunity to publish a broad range of expression through poetry, prose, art, photography, opinion, and journalism.

The celebration of “Women’s History Month” at Holy Cross, and throughout the United States, shows how important the recognition of the accomplishments made by women is to how future women will shape society. The knowledge of women’s strengths not only encourages respect by both sexes but also helps to nourish self-esteem and build confidence in children and adults. By studying the achievements of the past, people become aware of the potential all women have for future success.

The Women’s Forum of Holy Cross also serves the purpose of generating the awareness and interest of students in women’s issues. The organization provides a place to discuss these issues and gives support by acting as a network for those affected by and concerned with contemporary women’s issues in the community.

The Women’s Forum also sponsors “The Women’s Forum Journal,” a publication that focuses primarily on women. This journal provides students with the opportunity to publish a broad range of expression through poetry, prose, art, photography, opinion, and journalism.

The celebration of “Women’s History Month” at Holy Cross, and throughout the United States, shows how important the recognition of the accomplishments made by women is to how future women will shape society. The knowledge of women’s strengths not only encourages respect by both sexes but also helps to nourish self-esteem and build confidence in children and adults. By studying the achievements of the past, people become aware of the potential all women have for future success.

The celebration of “Women’s History Month” at Holy Cross, and throughout the United States, shows how important the recognition of the accomplishments made by women is to how future women will shape society. The knowledge of women’s strengths not only encourages respect by both sexes but also helps to nourish self-esteem and build confidence in children and adults. By studying the achievements of the past, people become aware of the potential all women have for future success.

The celebration of “Women’s History Month” at Holy Cross, and throughout the United States, shows how important the recognition of the accomplishments made by women is to how future women will shape society. The knowledge of women’s strengths not only encourages respect by both sexes but also helps to nourish self-esteem and build confidence in children and adults. By studying the achievements of the past, people become aware of the potential all women have for future success.

The celebration of “Women’s History Month” at Holy Cross, and throughout the United States, shows how important the recognition of the accomplishments made by women is to how future women will shape society. The knowledge of women’s strengths not only encourages respect by both sexes but also helps to nourish self-esteem and build confidence in children and adults. By studying the achievements of the past, people become aware of the potential all women have for future success.

The celebration of “Women’s History Month” at Holy Cross, and throughout the United States, shows how important the recognition of the accomplishments made by women is to how future women will shape society. The knowledge of women’s strengths not only encourages respect by both sexes but also helps to nourish self-esteem and build confidence in children and adults. By studying the achievements of the past, people become aware of the potential all women have for future success.