Drinking games, page 12

more seconds of drinking. The final, single card flipped means finish a drink.

Twos: Infamous for its brutality, this game is rarely completed. The dealer deals to each successive player until a player reaches the twos. The player who has the twos is then the new dealer. All other cards are returned to the deck. This player then takes a sip, and keeps the two in front of him. Next round, the process is repeated, except that, instead of a two, a three stops the dealing. Then, the person dealt the two takes a sip, followed by the person dealt the three. If the person can't afford the sip, the dealer must take one himself.

No one has ever completed this game without a skip. You don't have to be a speedster to finish this game. You only need a little bit of self esteem, and a lot of practice.

Table Games

Beirut: Also known as "beer-pong," this is probably the most popular of all drinking games. It's a game of skill, movement, and, of course, drinking. Everybody knows the rules, but here are some discrepancies that could be beneficial to all players.

First, it's just a matter of personal preference when you make your turn. Some people like to make their shots as early as possible, while others prefer to wait until the last minute. You can either make your shot, or wait until the last minute before calling your shot. This is a question of personal preference.

There is absolutely no harm in doing this. The important thing is to have fun and enjoy the game.

Choosing Your Cigars

Or, "why the world hates you"

BY MIKE ZELLER

CRUSADER FEATURES HUMORIST

Welcome back, dear reader. I hope you had a restful break because it's that time of year again. Fall classes begin next week, and the holidays will be here before you know it. I hope you're ready to have some fun.

Q: What exactly is the purpose of course selection?

A: Basically, course selection is an elaborate plot by the administration to break the will of all its students through repeated frustration and reduce them to drooling, brain-dead idiots so that when they graduate and get high-paying jobs they will donate large sums of money to Holy Cross. What else could possibly explain why supposedly high-intelligent humans would be giving away large amounts of money to an institution that they paid a ton to attend in the first place?

Q: What are some good courses to take?

A: Some good courses to take include, but are not limited to: The Science of Watching Television, Video Game Mastery, Understanding the Collective Works of the Marquee Desaad, Slacking Off 101, Nihilism and You, and Surviving Holy Cross 101. These classes are offered at this school, but if they were, you'd want to take them.

Q: What is the best department to take classes in?

A: Duh, English.

Q: Would you recommend taking five classes a semester?

A: Well, that all depends. If you enjoy things like, say, getting shot in the face at close range by a shotgun, or getting tied down to a table and having your spleen removed without anesthesia, then taking a class like "murder" is probably a good idea. If you're a bit of a wimp, then I would recommend five classes a semester. This way, you can avoid the horrors of Holy Cross while still enjoying a few of your favorite courses.

Q: What does, "By Permission mean, in relevance to a course?

A: Well, as we all know, "by permission" means that you might not be familiar with the fact that "permission" is the Gaenic word for "in the year of our Lord." It's just a way of telling you that you can't take this course, unless you have the proper prerequisites.

Q: What's wrong with the old one?

A: Oh, I don't know. I mean, last semester I only had to wait in a TWO hour line, and getting PRACTICUM added to my otherwise perfect schedule was definitely the highest importance, and it really wasn't THAT cold outside, most of the snow was melting, after all. And I'm sure the practice I have now is much more convenient than the old one. It's just a lot roomier and more comfortable.

Q: Can I have a soda?

A: Sure.

Q: Thanks?

A: No problem.

Q: Would you recommend taking five classes a semester?

A: Well, that all depends on your personal preference. If you're a bit of a wimp, then taking five classes a semester is a good idea. If you're a bit of a speedster, then taking five classes a semester is just fine.

Q: What should I do if I don't get a seat?

A: Go on a barstool rampage, ending with a final climactic showdown with all-American hero Steven Segal in which he kills you and takes your seat.

Q: Is there anyway to avoid this whole mess?

A: Well, you could always commit seppuku and die honorably. I think the old system was just fine.

All and all, I'm sure the practice I have now is much more convenient than the old one. It's just a lot roomier and more comfortable.

Well, that's all the time for Q & A we have now. If I didn't cover something that you wanted to talk about, then just send me an e-mail and I'll make sure to laugh at your stupidity. Anyway, we're getting near the end of the semester, so be sure to make your key eyes peeled for my appearance in the upcoming satirical issue. Until then, fasten your seatbelts and make sure to ob-