Distractions reign storms Students struggle to focus on multiple tasks

These days, it’s hard to stay focused on one thing, a recent sur-cvey of Holy Cross students found.

“I can’t stop thinking about my international relations class” said a perturbed student, “and it’s really affecting my day-to-day life. For instance, the other day I was getting Madagascan for my Car, and I saw a hot fudge with a big-Iraq, so I ran over to her and said ‘I wanna Australia.’ Then I don’t ‘ wanna Russia, but I have some obsessed with Billy Bob There are a lot of people who just can do pre-med and still focus on other things. And that’s not a fu-la. When I need a break, I sometimes go to O’Kane and look at the sports display, or listen to clavicle music. I tend to keep my mind open. I don’t mean to be corny, but if there’s one thing I do lobe to about, it’s music. I’ve involved in activities, too. You’ve to take things a liver at a time, because who noise when they’re feeling good.

Some believe that anyone of such a mere coincidence. Others will discuss their knowledge of psychics know how to read people, but...
